Markets finished lower after toggling between gains and losses. In early action the Dow attempted to recover from yesterday's triple-digit loss, but it fell 63 points to 12632. The S&P 500 Index decreased further below its three-month low as it declined nearly 8 points to 1330 and the NASDAQ was lower by just under 9 points to 2893. NYSE Composite volume totaled over 4 billion shares. The NYSE was 2-1 negative on issues and 4-1 negative on volume. Decliners beat advancers on the NASDAQ by 6-5 on issues and by 9-4 on volume. Stocks declined in afternoon trading as Eurozone concerns overshadowed encouraging economic data. News that Greece once again failed to agree on a coalition government prompted additional speculation that the country may exit the euro. On our shores, the NAHB index of builder confidence climbed to its highest level since 2007 which helped homebuilders stage a rally as Lennar gained 79 cents to $29.16. In addition, manufacturing in the New York region expanded more than forecast in May as shipments surged and new orders improved. Losses in the energy sector dragged markets lower. Crude oil slid to a five-month low as investors worried that resurgence in the Eurozone debt crisis may crimp demand which pushed Halliburton down $1.00 to $30.58 and Schlumberger lost $1.73 to $65.52. Treasuries finished virtually unchanged with the yield on the 10-year note holding at a seven-month low of 1.77% as it lost 2/32.
