Dear Townsquare Media New Jersey:

It is now a full year since Hurricane Sandy delivered so much devastation and loss as the most destructive storm in New Jersey history. Communities up and down the state's treasured Shore as well as cities and towns throughout New Jersey suffered damage and destruction that we have never before experienced. As costly as the damage is, it was more than just property that was lost to us. They are the homes that mean so much to families, the businesses that were built with hard work and are so important to the livelihoods of so many, the roads and bridges that are the lifeblood of our towns and cities and that link the communities across the state, and the utilities that are needed to sustain our day-to-day lives.

While Sandy was the worst storm in the state's history, it brought out the best of New Jersey. We were confronted with overwhelming challenges but we responded with the resilience and resolve that have long defined the people of New Jersey. The residents of the communities that were hit by Sandy and the larger New Jersey community came together as one. As neighbors, friends, co-workers, family and as emergency responders, public officials and private citizens we did all we could to help those in need to contend with the storm and its aftermath.

Townsquare Media and its network of radio stations across the state acted as a helpful and responsive part of the New Jersey community during the time of crisis when Sandy came ashore and it has continued to help serve the needs created by Sandy. When
