

Keisha D. (00:00):

So we're talking about a guy who I talked to for a while and, you know, and you just always try to make like, you know, some chit chat to get to know somebody. And he probably answered in a way that might have worked for other girls, but definitely not for me. I just said, what, so what do you like to do in your free time? And I think he was trying to be cute, but he said flirt with pretty ladies like you and I, all I said was, so you spend all your free time flirting and then his response was flirting is like a weapon. If you don't use it, your blade goes dull. So yeah, I make sure I flirt whenever I can.

James R. (00:36):

Holy chasing crackers.

Keisha D. (00:39):

And it's like, okay, so are you flirting with me right now? Because for you, this is just practice or are you actually interested in me?

James R. (00:48):

Right. What are you doing? Are you trying to sharpen, sharpen your knife? Or are you just bored? What's the deal. Yeah. You know, that would, I could see again, if you were in a long term relationship with someone, you might find some humor in that, but, and there's might be some people that love it that are just looking for a quick we who, but right. A little fo do do, but that's just that I could see where it would be unsettling.

Keisha D. (01:12):

Yeah. I was just kind of like, yeah, cuz I mean, you read that and you just think, huh? So am I just a practice? Like, are you seriously interested? Like now you're telling me that you flirt all the time. So how many other women are you talking to that you're telling the same thing to,

James R. (01:29):

You know, I'm a, I'm a I'm aerate flirt. It's part of how I communicate. It's something I learned while I was working at the bars and being a host. I, none of it's serious. And I think most people I talk to have are absolutely aware that I'm not trying to hit on 'em it's just a very open way I communicate and blah, blah, blah. But it still made boyfriends. It made boyfriends angry. And I guess I could kind of understand it, but I never made secure boyfriends angry. It always made the ones that were cheating angry.

Keisha D. (01:59):

Right. Exactly.

James R. (02:03):

And I swear, sometimes gals had me were happy to have me do it because their boyfriend wasn't paying enough attention to 'em.

Keisha D. (02:09):

Right.

James R. (02:11):

Did it ever turn, did that guy ever turn into anything or

Keisha D. (02:16):

No, I just, after that, I was just kind of like, I, I was like, I, I, I don't think so. Like I'm out and I just told him, I was like, I don't, this is gonna work. And then he didn't talk to me again. So I'm sure you found somebody else to flirt with, but for me, like that was just one of those things where I was like, I don't know you well enough to feel comfortable with you saying something like this to me.

James R. (02:35):

Well, it does sound like you don't know. Am I just your, a quick pastime till you find someone you wanna flirt with for real,

Speaker 3 (02:42):

Right.

James R. (02:42):

What am I, am I rash test dummy here.

Keisha D. (02:46):

Right, exactly. And so like, I was just like, Nope, pass.
